

Practitioner Call Out: Creative media

Paul Hamlyn Foundation and The Wallich Practitioner Call Out: Creative media

Summary

Are you a freelance creative practitioner with experience of working with participants from at risk or socially excluded groups?

The Wallich is looking for three experienced and enthusiastic practitioners specialising in creative media to facilitate workshops in three areas; Mid - North Wales, South West Wales and South East Wales between September and December 2022.

The Wallich is a leading homelessness and rough sleeping charity.

As part of an 'Explore and Test' project, funded by the Paul Hamlyn Foundation, workshop content will be led by interested practitioners, and we're keen to explore any and all ideas.

We will co-produce the workshops in collaboration with our service users, to make sure they are appealing and beneficial to everyone.

What are we offering?

We are asking each of the three creative practitioners to deliver:

- 1 day delivery per week for 12 weeks
- An additional 4 days for learning / evaluation / exhibition

Total 16 days @ £168 = £2,688

Our objectives: What do we want to achieve?

The Explore and Test project is called 'In the Margins' and our objectives are:

- Explore the potential of engagement with the arts as a way to replace chaotic habits with creative activities and mindsets.
- Explore creative workshops based in our residential projects to maximise participation and deepen engagement.
- Explore the importance of commissioning practitioners who specialise in working with at-risk or socially excluded participants in achieving meaningful outcomes.
- Adopt a person-centred approach, focusing on working to an individual's strengths and support removal of barriers.
- Change public perceptions of homelessness through positive engagements.

Brief: What we're looking for from a Creative Media Practitioner

We'd like to engage a creative media practitioner in each of the three regions (Mid - North Wales, South East Wales and South West Wales) who has experience of working with vulnerable, socially excluded participants.

The candidates will design and deliver a programme of workshops centred around creative media, which could include video, audio, filmmaking, photography, animation or any other ideas suggested by applicants, we are happy to explore any ideas you may have.

The specific workshop content and end performance / exhibition will be developed with input from workshop participants.

Workshops should be engaging and designed to introduce creative thinking, new skills, confidence and aspiration into participants' lifestyles.

We will also be exploring a robust evaluation framework throughout this project and will work with our successful practitioners to embed this into the project.

We would like the workshop series to culminate in an exhibition or other public display of work aimed at showcasing the results of the workshops and changing public perceptions of homelessness by challenging stereotypes and encouraging better understanding of homeless people.

A Welsh speaking practitioner is desirable.

Your proposal: what we want from you

If you would like to express interest in delivering a 12-week block of creative media workshops in either Mid - North Wales, South West Wales or South East Wales, please send us:

1) Your proposal

- What participants will learn.
- What will be created during the workshops.
- How the work will be exhibited at the end of the project.

2) Your CV

3) A cover letter

Including a short outline of your past experience facilitating creative workshops for vulnerable and socially excluded people including any relevant examples and images of past work.

References must be available on request.

How to apply
